"When Wesley Brooks moves to the Outer Banks of North Carolina for the summer of 1993, he expects to find warm water, a simple job, and maybe someone special to share nights on the beach with. Frustrated with menial tasks at work, and faced with an emergency he may have caused, Wesley is forced to answer for his actions. Only eighteen, he never expects to have someone's life in his hands. He thinks about packing up and moving home. Then he meets a girl. His confidence needs a boost and he finds it in a group of guys who aren't lacking any bravado. Wesley is captivated by the outrageous the skin from their outer corners to her small ears taut. Her lips were pale, and nearly too full for her small mouth, like something bled but bruised. He had never seen anyone or anything quite so beautiful in his life.' Graham Park is in love. But Sara Fitch is an enigma to him, a creature of almost perverse mystery. Steven Grout is paranoid - and with justice. He knows that They are out to get him. They are. Quiss, insecure in his fabulous if ramshackle castle, is forced to play interminable impossible games. The solution to the oldest of all paradoxical riddles will release him. But he must find an answer before he knows the question. Park, Grout, Quiss - no trio could be further apart. But their separate courses are set for collision.

of the 19th century is far from quiet. The other island residents include the surfmen--the African American crew of the nearby U.S. Life-Saving Station--and soon Nathan is lending an extra hand to these men as they rescue sailors from sinking ships. Working and learning alongside the courageous surfmen, Nathan begins to dream of becoming one himself. But the reality of post-Civil War racism starts to show itself as he gradually realizes the futility of his dream. And then another dream begins to take shape, one that Nathan refuses to let anyone take from him.
