A wrenching novel, its Ukrainian American author's first, depicts in plaintive detail the consequences of the 1986 nuclear power plant catastrophe at ``Chornobyl." Zabytko focuses on two women: widowed Marusia Petrenko, who lives in the village of Starylis with her son Yurko's family, and stays on tending to Yurko (an electrician at Chornobyl) while he lies dying of radiation poisoning, and his mercurial (and adulterous) wife Zosia escapes with their young children to the comparative ...

The Sky Unwashed by Irene Zabytko
Overview - A Ukrainian family returns to a devastated town soon after the Chernobyl disaster, only to discover that death and privation await in the wake of the world's worst nuclear accident.

The Sky Unwashed by Irene Zabytko - Books-A-Million

My first published novel, THE SKY UNWASHED is based on a true story. The heroines are a group of elderly women who returned to their deserted and highly contaminated village in the “dead zone,” the areas surrounding the Chornobyl (Ukrainian transliteration of “Chernobyl”) nuclear power plant, the site of the world’s worst nuclear accident.
